In early summer 2016, I started a photographic project with one image taken every single day. Sometimes a planned picture, more often a casual shooting: the simple recording of a moment, a place, a momentary mood, a certain light. As the only device, my old iPhone 4. Without indulging in sophisticated equipment or technical skills. Only a need to look at things with a focus on light and framing. Further, the choice to stick to the square format. I managed to hold up the game for more than six months, before considering the experiment concluded. This volume contains the large part of those images. Unpretentious, just pleasure for the eye.
